NO KHAKI ELECTION HERE

Exactly three months from today the presidential campaign will be over. In a little less than six months the next president of the United States will take office.

While Americans have been watching the event of a momentous year as they unfolded, time has been slipping away. The war is coming to the close of its first year, and there is an increasing amount of talk about the possibility it may go deeply into its second year. In Washington, observers say, there is a rumor that if it does go in a second year the United States will be one of the belligerents—sample of the grave decisions which men are called on to make in the capital.

It is, as well, part of the background of what might be a cockeyed presidential election. Mr. Roosevelt, himself, hinted he didn't intend to find many chances to debate with Mr. Wilkie in explaining how he happened to make up his mind that no one else should be allowed to try; he expects to keep busy with foreign affairs.

Between a genuine and a "khaki election," as they used to be called before the army changed to denim, stands the personality of one man, Wendell L. Wilkie. At the close of last week he announced he was getting his campaign "geared up and ready to start with a bang." First explosion is scheduled for Aug. 17, date of Candidate Wilkie's acceptance speech at Elwood, Ind. In the meantime, the man who intends to be Mr. Roosevelt's opponent whether Mr. Roosevelt wants to be his opponent or not, insists he is willing to answer all questions. The man who upset the apple cart at Philadelphia is going to be a hard man to ignore on the campaign platform.

RECIPROCAL INSULTS

Twice in the space of a week Great Britain has taken a page from the book of the "dynamic" states. First it announced in an offhand manner that it was going to blockade all European ports. Germany was furious. Then it announced it was arresting all the Japanese it could lay its hands on, presumably with the idea of cutting them around. Japan was furious. Japan was flabbergasted. Apparently, Englishmen had forgotten they were supposed to be gentlemen.

Japan is occupied currently with cuffing around Englishmen; it has been leading up to an international incident by leaps and bounds ever since the Konye cabinet took over. It is talking loudly about making a holy alliance with Germany, Italy and Russia. It is talking about throwing Englishmen out of the orient, feet first. It is thinking up names to call them at the rate of a new insult every minute. In all the ways known to the master "dynamists" of Europe, Japan is making life unpleasant for the British in Asia—and plainly is planning to make life unsafe as well.

The faint cheer which goes up as the British demonstrate to the Japanese what it's like to become victims of an international incident issues from the throats of everybody getting fed up with an insulting technique a little too crude to be called expert. The Japanese don't realize it, but for a nation claiming to be bringing in a new era their insulting methods are disgustingly old-fashioned—almost as old-fashioned as Germany's.

OBSERVE THE YELLOW LINE

Announcement has come from E. R. McCullough, division engineer for Division No. 11 of the state highway department, which division includes Columbiana county, that 134.6 miles of yellow line had been marked on highways in this division at 712 locations.

The highway department, headed by Col. Robert S. Beightler as director, decided on the use of the yellow line on all hilltops and curves with clear road vision of less than 600 feet, and 300 foot application at the approach of road intersections.

These yellow lines are put down for the protection of the 2,000,000 car owners and should be observed to save your property and yourself and others from getting injured or killed.

A wise motorist will not cross that yellow line when it is on his side of the white or black center line.

This yellow line is part of the life saving plans of the All-Ohio Traffic Safety contest which has the hearty approval of Governor Bricker and mayors of all cities and villages of Ohio.

These lines are being put down wherever danger lurks and it cannot be too strongly urged that everyone should protect himself and the other fellow by a strict observance of this yellow line.

FOR THE FUTURE BOOK

When so many tasks remain to be finished, ragweed elimination can't be made to seem important. Nevertheless, when war has been driven off the earth, all the communicable and non-communicable diseases eradicated, parsley outlawed in restaurants, tight races assured in all the professional baseball leagues, sweetness and light made to shine into all the dark corners, farmers aided to the limit of their desires, poverty finally made to disappear, the proletariat and the capitalist reconciled, the winters shortened and the summers lengthened and all the sorrows of mankind, including toil, lifted from his back—wouldn't it be possible to pud awd the rag weed id wud big pile ad burd it?

Nothing is more irksome than to hear some pot-bellied old windbag orating about what a good thing the discipline would be for the young men taken by conscription.

One of the dangers of flying is having to land and drive home.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, August 7

A moderately successful day, with certain rather surprising developments probably in connection with contracts, litigation, insurance or bequests. And yet there are possibilities of loss, reverses, extravagance or heavy expenditures. Be practical about this, or the benefits may ooze through the fingers. Also safeguard the health and that of the family, especially elderly females. Do not run counter to elders or superiors. Use discretion or diplomacy.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a rather successful year, with the interests centered on new contracts, insurance or probable bequests. Handle such with conservatism and wise judgment, lest the good fortune slip away through extravagance or self-indulgence. Use finesse when dealing with superiors or elders and safeguard the welfare of the latter.

A child born on this day should be endowed with many social graces and talents being artistic, idealistic, congenial and affable, but pleasure-loving.

MUNITIONS PLANTS IN OHIO

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Because Ohio's inland position minimizes "the hazard of attack from the air," the state is part of an area under consideration by the war department for munition plant sites.

Col. H. K. Rutherford, director of the planning branch in the ordnance department, said yesterday other factors in Ohio's favor include its high industrialization and resources.

He added, however, that some communities apparently fail to realize a munitions plant probably would employ a large number of workers for a time, then suspend operations and be placed on the reserve list. The officer also observed, "we don't want to concentrate new plants in areas which would carry a large part of the industrial load anyway."

The prospective area of which Ohio is a part includes southwestern Pennsylvania, West Virginia, western Virginia and eastern Kentucky. Four other areas have been suggested.

Officers reported they expect about $700,000,000 from present and past defense appropriations to erect some 60 munitions plants.

OUR READERS

YOU'RE IN THE ARMY

Editor, The News: Well, we'll make believe by this time you are in the army. One of those physically fit to make this U. S. A. "safe for democrats" or should I say "safe for democracy."

We'll say that you have been assigned to a certain company and regiment and you have reported for duty. You have been issued clothing, your fighting equipment and eating weapons. You have a bunk and bedding that goes with it. Let's call this a day, get to bed so as to start the next day on a regular routine schedule.

It is morning of our first day in the army as full fledged soldier regularly assigned.

Our first appreciation of this is when the bugler on guard blows "first call." This means what it says, too, and you'd better obey. You have a very short time between this call and "assembly." "Assembly" call means that you and your buddies are to assemble in line and answer "roll call."

If you fail to be present at this your first sergeant reports you absent to the company officer who takes his company report and in turn reports to the officer of the day who is in charge of guard protecting the post for 24 hours or until a new guard is mounted.

If you are absent from this or any other duty from which you have been excused you have something coming to instill in you the need of discipline.

"Reveille" is over and the first sergeant or company commander may decide you need about a 15-minute workout to waken you, such as setting up exercises or running around the camp. Back you come and given the command "Fall out and police the camp." This means that every man go round and pick up refuse thrown around as burnt matches, cigar and cigar butts and paper. On completion the command is "dismissed."

By this time you are ready for breakfast, but is it ready for you? We will assume it is and some representative of the cook's court will yell "come and get it." To others this means same as "soup's on."

If you are in camp you may have regular dishes, if not, you will have your mess kit and get your cereal, bacon (sometimes with eggs), coffee and bread. After consuming this you will find a bucket or tub of hot water to wash your mess kit, dry it and then put it away.

Back from breakfast you make your bunk and tidy up for the visit of the company commander, usually after first drill in the morning. You stand at side of your bunk so if it does not suit him you are handed "Saturday" is usually the weekly inspection of man and equipment and are more thoroughly gone into.

The first drill is usually one of maneuvering, executing squads right, right front in line, line or column of platoons, etc. This is a company drill. This is over when the captain or commander of the company at this drill has the trumpet blow recall from drill. The bugler or guard also blows it for benefit of all the companies at drill.

Back to quarters. You will have a rest period and then some individual drill like manual of arms or small bore target practice, etc. Then you may have a rest period until noon. This may be broken up if you are a non-commissioned officer, by school, where the subjects of army regulations, guard duty, drill manual, field regulations, etc., are taught. Certificates of proficiency are given "non coms" completing these courses satisfactorily.

About now you are waiting for mess call and the call of "come and get it." This time it is dinner. After a good meal of muscle and brain building food you may have an hour or two rest to do what it doesn't take long for any soldier to learn, namely "bunk fatigue" or to civilians it is same as an afternoon nap.

Later in the afternoon you may have another formation and drill in various tactics. Getting on in the day we prepare for the close of the day, namely, "retreat." Companies are formed, rolls called, reports made and when all are ready "retreat" is sounded. If a band is stationed at your camp and the weather is good they play "The Star Spangled Banner" while all remain at attention as the standard or flag is lowered by the guard. If weather does not permit a band then the bugler sounds "To the Standard" and the flag is lowered and taken to the guard house until morning.

After "retreat" and you have had your meal you are free, unless otherwise ordered, until 11 p. m. or "taps" at which time, unless you have a written pass, you better be in bed. At this time check is taken by a non-commissioned officer.

in charge of quarters and absentees reported to the officer of the day or sergeant of the guard or maybe the officer of the guards, whoever is ordered to take this report. If you were absent at this time, the man in charge of quarters would report to one designated to take this report something like this, "company A—one private absent, Sir." No names mentioned then but they will be the next day, don't worry.

Ahead of taps is "lights out" usually about 9 p. m. when all lights have to be out in camp and quiet must prevail around sleeping quarters.

In actual warfare of course the routine would be different. Hoping you will not see this condition I am only describing a peacetime camp. Again intensive training would cut down your rest periods and drills and study may last into the night.

Leave of absence are comparatively easy to get providing you do not want them too often or too long at a time.

Discipline may seem too tough but there must be certain hard and fast rules or otherwise there would be that "familiarity breeds contempt" and the line of authority would be worthless.

There are field days and just the same sports and just as hotly contested in the army as outside of it. You are not marooned and all your pleasures cut off. But uppermost there must be discipline and respect for superiors whether non-commissioned or commissioned. This is no different than in your office or shop. There must be a head and his orders respected.

Oldtime Remedies Discussed

Common Sense Leads First Aids

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

1. Treatment of nosebleed:

ACCORDING to the reports, the old-fashioned treatment of nosebleed by the use of salt pork has been rehabilitated by Dr. A. J. Core, of St. Louis. Plugs of salt pork put in the nose promptly stopped bleeding after other methods had failed. These are easier to introduce than the usual packing and certainly easier to remove. It has the property of preventing recurrence.

Nose bleed usually comes from exertion or from opening up a small ulcer in the nose due to scabs of dried mucus. It may herald the onset of infectious diseases such as measles or rheumatism. It may mean inadequacy of the liver or anemia or high blood pressure. It is by no means always a minor ailment, but may result in serious loss of blood.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only and then only through his column.

2. Answers to first aid test questions:

Earlier in the week we asked a few questions designed to test the vacationists' knowledge of first aid. The question as to what is the matter with a man whom you find in a stuffy room on a hot day with pale clammy skin and shallow breathing in heat exhaustion. Proper treatment is to remove his clothes and dash cold water on his skin with some force.

The question, "when a child comes to you rubbing his eye and says the wind blew something in it, will you tell him to rub towards the nose or away from it or rub the other eye?" should be answered: "don't let him rub his eyes at all, roll the lid back and brush it with a clean handkerchief."

Dentists To Rally

In Cleveland For Centenary Program

Ohio will be host to more than 10,000 dentists from all parts of the nation who will gather in Cleveland Sept. 9 to 13 for the centenary convention of the American Dental association.

Many of the most important of American dentistry were in Ohio whose sons distinguished themselves in the profession. Governor Bricker has proclaimed the week of Sept. 8 Dental Health week in Ohio.

The entire arena of the Cleveland Public auditorium will be filled with scientific, health and historical exhibits which are open to the public. Dentistry in America—which is acknowledged to be far superior to any other nation—takes its beginning from establishment of the first dental college in Baltimore, Md. in 1840, the event which is commemorated in the centennial celebration.

TITAN TOWER" by JAMES G. CHESNUTT

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

When Linda arrived at her home that evening after work, Mickey was sitting in his room and Mrs. Blauer was sewing in the kitchen. Linda thought it strange that the neighbor woman acted so innocently gaily like a small boy caught in the jam cupboard. Mrs. Blauer, finding some excuse, hastily left.

A few minutes later, when she read the note, Linda understood Mrs. Blauer's strange conduct.

"Mickey," Linda said to her son, "what's that you have in your hand?"

She crouched and tried to take from Mickey the small black book which he was eagerly scanning with a wise expression, as though he could read, and understand, the writing in it.

"Don't!" he screamed sharply, as she sought to take the book from him. "It's Mickey's—Steve gave it to me!"

Linda, who could read the writing but couldn't understand, saw that Mickey had spoken the truth.

It was a bankbook, and on the first page, Linda's address.

On the next page there was the inked record of a single deposit. It read: $2.00.

Linda, half way out the back door to see Mrs. Blauer and extract the secret from her, saw the note on the kitchen table. With trembling hands, she opened it and read—as far as she could.

"Linda," it began, "Please don't try to give it back. It's Mickey's, not yours."

It's pretty small ammunition against the Mortons' big guns, but it will help him fight to keep some of that it's pretty tough to lose.

"Besides, I won't need the money, really, I'm going up to run the ranch—and I'll be growing the stuff on trees pretty soon."

"The reason my handwriting's so good is that Mrs. Blauer wrote this for me—I never could write, even without blanks on my hands...."

That was as far as Linda could read.

Through the tears welling in her eyes she saw something that she had been blind to only too long. She saw something which her heart had been trying to tell her ever since a sunny morning on the roof of Titan Tower when a fresh young "heart specialist" in a mechanic's jumper first barged into her life—and Mickey's.

And Linda resolved then, in all humility, to go to Steve and to tell him how blind she had been.

Linda would have gone to Steve right away—had she known where to find him. When she did learn the whereabouts of Aunt Cynthia's ranch, it was too late. Something—something terrible and unforeseen—was to intervene. Something which would help the Bradley Mortons in their custody fight.

On Tuesday, the Bradley Mortons had arrived from Chicago, and had taken a suite at a fashionable hotel. On Tuesday night, Janice Marberry, knowing through Jo that the Mortons had conferred with Jack Blaine and Lawson, his employee, sought out Jack.

Now was the time to see Jack, Janice reasoned; now was the time to learn whether he had heeded her pleas, as the text of his letter to Jo's employer had indicated; now was the time to learn, from Jack's own lips—whether he was going through with the fight to take Linda's boy from her. NOW!

A telephone call to Jack's home brought the reply: "He's at Titan Tower. He'll be there late. He said he was working on an important case."

"At the office?" Janice asked. "No, in Mr. Blaine's penthouse." Janice, however, didn't call the number. Donning a hat and her light tweed coat—the one with the patch pockets of beaver, which Linda had worn at Lake Tahoe—she took a quick glance in the mirror and then called a taxi.

When Janice left the house, she did not notice the little man lounging beside a tree at the curb, a man whose dark clothing, black suit and hat, seemed to merge with the gloom about him. Nor did she notice that the man climbed into a car and followed her taxi.

When Janice's taxi pulled to a stop in front of Titan Tower, the car of the man-in-black was not far behind. Janice, as she dashed into the building, didn't notice that she was being followed. Nor did she know that this shadow was accompanied by another man, who carried a square black box and a small handbag.

Janice couldn't see either, as she walked up to the elevator with as much nonchalance as she could command under the circumstances, that the shadow withdrew from his pocket a folded newspaper clipping and showed it to his companion.

The clipping was a reproduction of the photograph of Linda taken at Lake Tahoe; Linda wearing Janice's distinctive coat—the same coat which Janice herself now wore.

"It's her all right," the shadow whispered. "We'll wait and grab the next elevator."

Twenty-six floors above them, Attorney Jack Blaine was admitting Janice to his father's penthouse.

"Jan!" he exclaimed. "What in the world.... How did you find me here?"

"Don't you...." Janice said, and she bit her lip as her eyes searched his face for the answer she yearned.

"Don't you want to see me, Jack?"

"Darling," he answered, "Please don't.... you know I do—always."

When they were comfortably seated by the fireplace, Janice tried to turn the conversation toward the reason for her unexpected call.

"I don't want to butt into your business.... again, Jack," she began, "but is it true that the Mortons are going to drop the case? Oh, I HOPE so; I hope so, so much...."

Jack looked at her a long time before answering.

"Do we have to talk about that tonight, Jan?" he asked, and his arm slid down to encircle her shoulders. "About other folks' lives, I mean, when we have our own lives—when we have us?"

The warmth from the fire was cozy, the lights were low, and the stars, peering in the vaulted penthouse window from a moonless sky, were very bright. But Janice tried again.

"It IS my life, Jack," she said, sitting up. "If anything happens to Linda, if she loses her boy, it would just kill me!"

Jack stood up and walked about, lost in thought....

"Look, dear," he said, softly, "I know, I've given it a lot of thought, but let's talk it over later. Right now we have a lot of remembering to do. Of us—of nights by the fire like this...."

Outside below the grilled iron stairs leading from the penthouse, two figures in black waited. They had waited hours....

"Eesh!" warned the shadow. "Here she comes. Get focused on the stairs!"

When the photographer's flash bulb was ignited, Janice felt it, rather than saw it. She couldn't have covered up her face in time to beat the flash—but her face already was covered, because Janice's arm was in front of her face and the reason it was there was because Janice was crying.

Yet in that flash everything stood revealed to Janice—everything. As clearly as the bright flare illumined the penthouse surroundings did that other inner flash, which came to Janice, show a course for Janice to take—a course she must take.

Jack Blaine, attorney for the Mortons, was going through with his fight against Linda. And now she, Janice herself, had given the Mortons some pictorial evidence for that court battle.

That was why the Mortons' hirelings, who had scuttled below after obtaining the picture, had taken it! That was why they had watched and waited. She wasn't Janice to them—she was Linda!

Their picture would show the coat that Linda had worn, Janice's picture—a picture of a girl in a distinctive coat, her face covered—would be Linda's picture to the public and maybe the court, too!

Thus Janice, who loved Linda so sincerely, would be the innocent instrument responsible for handing Mickey over to the Mortons.

Janice's course became clear to her. She must stop them from producing that picture. She MUST!

Immediately before her lay a fork in that clearly-defined course—two ways to accomplish the same end, the end that must be achieved.

The first was to follow immediately after the Morton minions, the photographer and the shadow, to catch them before they sped away, and to convince them that there, that she was NOT Linda. The second....

Janice, a heartbroken girl with little for which to live, was strangely fascinated by the prospect which that second fork held for her. Strangely and morbidly gripped by the way it beckoned. In this second solution was a definite, irrevocable answer, no loose ends....

Another of the "Maise" comedies with Ann Southern as the breezy showgirl, comes to the State Wednesday and Thursday, with Lee Bowman, Slim Summerville, Virginia Weidler, Mary Nash and John F. Hamilton.

"Gold Rush Maise," sets Maise Ravier down in a ghost town in Arizona and then leaves her to stir up a lively assembly of natives and migrants. A family of migratory workers from Arkansas, a not too hospitable young farmer, a bogus gold strike and Maise's lively, caustic wit combine to form one of the best of the series.

Concluding tonight at the State is "Untamed" with Ray Milland, Akim Tamiroff, Patricia Morison and Jane Darwell.

At the Grand Wednesday only is a double bill: "Queen of the Mob," based on J. Edgar Hoover's "Person in Hiding" with Blanche Yurka, Ralph Bellamy, J. Carroll Nash, Jean Cagney, William Henry and Richard Denning; and "Pop Always Pays" with Leon Errol, Dennis O'Keefe, Adele Pearce and Walter Catlett.

Leitha Ann Rowan

This is Leitha Ann Rowan, 6, who was bitten by a copperhead during snake handling rites of the Free Holiness cult at Adel, Ga. Her father and the Rev. W. T. Phipps were jailed. Although the girl's hand still is swollen, cultists say that she is recovering. Doctors report her condition "is still serious."

10-Game Football Schedule Planned For Salem High Team.

QUAKERS MEET SAME FOES AS LAST SEASON

Open Grid Season Here Against Sebring On Sept. 20

A 10-game schedule has been planned for Salem High school's 1940 football team, Faculty Manager Frederick E. Cope revealed today.

The Quakers' 1940 schedule is identical with last year's, Cope said, except in the location of games. The same opponents will be played in the same order as last year, according to present plans.

Cope pointed out that the only difference between this year's is that seven home games were played by the Quakers in 1939 while five home games are scheduled for the 1940 season.

One Game Uncertain
Nine of the 10 games have been definitely scheduled, Cope announced, while the other game is in the tentative stage.

Cope is now negotiating with Youngstown South for a game in Youngstown Saturday, Nov. 16. He is not certain that South will be booked, but indicated that a game with the Youngstown school is considered likely.

Cope said that athletic officials of Youngstown South requested a game with Salem some time ago, but had taken no further action. He said he was not sure whether the game will be scheduled as expected this week.

If South is not booked, Cope said, the Quakers will not attempt to fill the date, but will leave it open and play a nine-game schedule. The open date, if South is not booked, would give the Quakers a 12-day rest before the all-important game with Alliance on Thanksgiving day.

Six of the Quakers' probable 10 games are scheduled for Friday night, three for Saturday afternoon and one for a Thursday afternoon.

Open Sept. 20
The schedule opens with a game here against Sebring Friday night, Sept. 20, and closes with a game at Alliance Thanksgiving day, Thursday, Nov. 21.

Coach Carl Schroeder, who with Assistant Coach Frank Gordon is now attending a coaching school at West Virginia university, is expected to start practice Tuesday, Sept. 3.

The complete schedule follows:
*Fri., Sept. 20—Sebring (Here).
*Sat., Sept. 28—Ravenna (There).
*Fri., Oct. 4—E. Liverpool (Here).
*Fri., Oct. 11—Struthers (There).
*Fri., Oct. 18—Wellsville (There).
*Fri., Oct. 25—Lisbon (Here).
*Fri., Nov. 1—Dover (Here).
*Sat., Nov. 9—Barberton (Here).
*Sat., Nov. 16—Youngstown South (There) tentative.
*Thurs., Nov. 21—Alliance (There).
*Denotes night game.

INDIANS START PENNANT DRIVE

Tribe Returns To First Place In American League Race

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—If pitching can win, count the Indians in.

That's the way the Cleveland baseball club looked at its pennant chances today after Mel Harder demonstrated again that top form comes to him late in the season.

Harder pitched the Tribe to a 10 to 1 victory yesterday, checking the Chicago White Sox upward climb and moving Cleveland into first place as the Detroit Tigers split a double header with St. Louis.

The Indians pounded Edgar Smith and Pete Appleton for 12 hits.

Pitching a full game for the first time this season, Harder held the White Sox to five hits and was deprived of a shutout by Mike Kreevich's homer.

Pitching Tips

The veteran right-hander's late mastery of mound technique bolstered the Indians' already strong pitching to the point where they figured this department could keep them in top position.

The gagging of Roy Weatherly with a $500 bonus offer didn't hurt the Tribe's pennant stock either.

President Alva Bradley offered the fiery outfielder this sum if he would call off his feud with umpires. Back talk put him out of a game at Boston several weeks ago, and he has been threatened with indefinite suspension the next time he argues with an umpire.

The Indians couldn't afford that—his 322 batting average lead the club.

John Allen reverted to the role of starting pitcher as Cleveland and Chicago met in a double header today. Al Milnar was named to share the mound work and Lefty Lee and Bill Dietrich were the Sox' selections.

MOURNING REDS TAKE ON CUBS

Cincinnati Club Opens Six-Day Home Stand Against Chicago

CINCINNATI, Aug. 6.—The Cincinnati Reds, still unable to shake the thought that only Friday a bouncing little fellow in No. 5 uniform was among them, take on the Chicago Cubs today in the first game of a six-day home stand.

The No. 5 uniform is retired as a last tribute to Willard Hershberger, who killed himself in Boston Saturday, but the game like the play, must go on. Gene Thompson, if his spiked heel is in good enough shape, must go out and pitch today, against Jake Mooty, as if nothing happened.

Gene's injury, suffered in the battle of Ebbets field two weeks ago today, was just the first of the series of misfortunes besetting the Reds on their critical 16-game road trip. Ernie Lombardi, the big catcher, suffered a sprained ankle duties fell on Hershberger and Rookie Bill Baker. Then, in Boston, Hershberger's act was the final blow.

Despite these happenings and the fact that the team played only 500 ball on the tour, the Reds came back with their lead over the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers at six games, one longer than when they left.

HERRON TWIRLS NO-HITTER, BUT LOSER VERDICT

Recreation Spoils Perfect Game For Washingtonville Star

The fates were unkind to Pitcher Herron of the Washingtonville Merchants in the Class A softball league Monday evening.

Herron pitched a no-hit game against the Salem Recreation, but lost the decision, 1 to 0.

A streak of wildness in the second inning kept Herron from shutting out the top-ranking Recreation stars. He issued a walk at the start of the second frame to Bob Campbell, who advanced to third on two wild pitches by the Washingtonville twirler. A fly ball to roving shortstop scored Campbell with the Recreation's lone run.

Threaten To Tie Score

The Washingtonville club threatened to tie the score in the fifth inning but the run that would have deked the count was cut off on a close play at the plate.

Pitcher George Early of the Recreation gave up four hits in blanking Washingtonville.

The victory was the Recreation stars' fourth in a row, keeping them tied for first place in the league's second half race with the National Sanitary and Leontonia Merchants.

Coming from behind with two runs in the last half of the seventh, the Salem Eagles' no-hit in the Trades Class, 3 to 2, in the other Class A game.

The Trades Class scored one run in the first and one in the fourth, while limiting the Eagles to one run in the fourth, to lead until the seventh inning when the F. O. E. unhooked a two-run rally to pull the game out of the fire.

Outbit Eagles

Although losing, the Trades Class outbit the Eagles, collecting 10 safe blows off Pitcher Ralph Gregg, Marshall Sutherin, pitching for the Trade Class, allowed six hits.

The Presbyterians and Baptists suffered their first set-backs of the Church league's third round race as the Presbyterians fell before the Young People's Catholic Club, 7 to 3, and the Baptists lost to the Methodist, 7 to 6.

The Y. P. C. C., in defeating the Presbyterians, remained unbeaten in the third round race, keeping tied for first place with the Trinity Lutherans, who are also unbeaten.

At the end of the Franco-Prussian war, in 1871, the Rothschilds rose to great renown by paying off with a single check the whole of the indemnity which Germany demanded of France—5,000,000,000 gold francs. This sum was paid off well in advance of the date fixed to obtain the premature departure of the German armies from Paris. Later the national government of M. Thiers—the third French republic—borrowed the money from its citizens and repaid the Rothschilds.

At the start of this war, the Rothschilds began decentralizing their French banking business, having the example of what happened to the Austrian branch where Barons Louis and Eugene Rothschild were taken prisoner by the Germans and held for ransom.

Of the French branch, Baron Edouard de Rothschild, head of the family and head of the bank, as well as outstanding sportsman and racehorse owner, sold his stables, closed his bank and went to Spain with all his family. He departed later for America.

Baron Maurice de Rothschild, senator, well known in America, went to England. Baron Robert de Rothschild took his family to Spain, where the Austrian cousins, Louis and Eugene, also migrated.

MOTOR REVENUE LOSSES HALTED

1939 Profits Are Stressed By Inspection Division

Revenue losses in the inspection division, bureau of motor vehicles, Ohio department of highways, have been stopped, and profits are continuing to be piled up for the benefit of users of the state system of roads, it was reported today by Cylon W. Wallace, registrar of motor vehicles.

For the last ten months of 1939 revenue collected totaled $175,821, compared with $37,151 in 1938. For the same period the cost of collection was $35,584 for 1939 and $51,234 for 1938. The 1939 profit reached $119,257, and the 1938 deficit was $14,083.

Nine-Month Record High

For the last nine months of 1939 the revenue collected reached $166,913 compared with $35,719 in 1938. The cost of collection in 1939 was $49,758, and in 1938 it was $47,102, leaving a 1939 profit of $117,154, compared with a deficit of $11,384 in 1938.

For the ten-month period the amount of increase in revenue was $138,670, and the increase in the cost of collection was $3,550. The per cent of increase in revenue being $33.26. For the nine-month period the amount of increase in revenue in 1939 was $131,194, and the cost of collection increase was $1,384.

Commenting on the continued accumulation of a profit from motor vehicle inspection, Robert S. Beighler, director of the department of highways, said:

"The people of Ohio should feel gratified over these figures. Whenever a department of state government can wipe out a deficit, and go forward and pile up a profit, and at the same time hold down the cost of collection of the revenues involved that department is doing the kind of work which the automobile driving public expects and for which it is paying."
